

I WILL PERSIST UNTIL I SUCCEED!

Master Newton once said, "The right way and the hard way are the same way." I have been a student of Newton Taekwondo since I was seven years old. I am now sixteen and wear a red belt. I will test for my black stripe later this month. If I succeed, my next belt will be a black belt, which I hope to earn by the time I graduate high school in two years. There is no guarantee of success, however, and I will have to work very hard if I am to reach my goal. My teacher, Nick Kapande, is a fifth degree black belt and he is very strict in teaching the Taekwondo skills he learned from Master Newton. Mr. Kapande also demands his Taekwondo students have top fitness, and his classes are extremely rigorous. I have left a lot of sweat and tears in his Dojang. It has been a difficult nine year journey that has often left me exhausted both physically and emotionally. Nevertheless, I have never wavered in my commitment to succeed, and Mr. Kapande has never wavered in his support and desire to help me be successful. I am an eager student and he is an expert teacher. We share a mutual respect and an absolute commitment to excellence. The path he has shown me is a hard one, but I am certain that it is the right one for me. I will persist until I succeed. Pilsung!
